Mrs. Titus tried to remember the other customers that she had said she was going to visit, but in the rush and confusion they escaped her mind. So she let the matter drop till morning, fully expecting that the predous gems would turn up all right.

Mr. and Mrs. Titus went to the ball Day. And with that remarkable avalanche scene the drama ended, Ah, the loy of that! A faithful lover sacrificed his life to soare that of the ingenue

"HEARTS ARE TRUMPS" CONTAINS TWO STARS AND FOUR MYSTERIES.

"Hearis Are Trumps" consists principally, to my mind, of two stars and four mysteries. The two stars are Charles Frohman and that other indefatigable little man, Joseph Humphreys: while the four mysteries are: What became of Holland? How did May Buckley and Joseph Cunningham get across that abyse, and was Miller Heart burt? that abyes, and was Miller Rent Bust?

Tou see, that avaianche soene came so suddenly, so bewilderingly, at the olimax of the play that I, who had left my glasses at home, couldn't follow it. Talk about three-ring circuses that the futility of attempting to gase upon the bareback riders, aerial performers and trained elephants at the same time, you want to see that last scene of the latest vellous (no, that word is entirely inadequate; let's try 'stupendous')—it's the most stupendous thing in the scenic line ever attempted in New York, and inasmuch as it was Mr. Prohman and Mr. to took the bag downstairs when the refresser called and tossed it on a lil desk beside the chair on which she is the did not notice their loss until the evening. right in her head. "It's cheap novels done it," whispered the policeman who brought her to ourt. "She's gone daft on 'em."

The girl was cashier in a Sixth avenue store. Her acounts yesterday were $8.56 short. She admitted taking small sums at various times to buy luxuries for her invalid mother. She grabbed a well-thumbed novel when arrested, and took it to the station house with her. "Let me have this and I won't be afraid," she said. In her cell she sat absorbed in the pages of a tawdry romance until a late hour, when her affanced called in company with Dr. J. Bond Littig, of 165 West Ferty-seventh street, to bail her out,
